

I am writing to inform you of my opinion that the further deregulation of ownership limits is a terrible mistake and will contribute to the death of true democracy. The base of which is the free flow of ideas and opinions. Currently, media conglomeration has left the power of the airwaves in the hands of an elite minority, limiting the spectrum of thought and news available to citizens. There is no justifiable reason to further restrict the sources of information. The airwaves are owned by the public, yet access is limited to five monstrous corporations. In fact, the opposite is needed. More regulation on the cross-ownership of media markets and sources is needed. Diversity of thought is the back-bone of democracy, don't kill that more than you already have.
